Instructions:

Step 1. I laid out the bracelet in a beading tray to see how it would look.

Step 2. With it laid out like this it is easy to begin stringing. And you can easily see how to add or take away beads to make it longer or shorter. To lengthen, remember that 1 inch is roughly equal to 25mm, so 2 12mm beads will get about 1 inch.

Step 3. String all the beads onto the wire. I always string directly onto my spool of wire. It saves me a couple of inches. At the loose end, add the crimp tube, the wire protector, put the ring of the clasp into the center of the wire protector and thread the wire back through the crimp tube. Pull snugly and crimp. I like to send the wire back through the first bead as it makes it hand evenly. Then cut the wire. Below show how the ring fits into the wire protector (The clasp shown is not the one we used in this design, but the theory is the same.)

Step 4. Cut the wire on the opposite end of the bracelet about 2 inches longer than the bracelet and add the crimp tube, wire protector and the jump ring. Be sure the jump ring is closed tightly (close and twist a couple of times gently to harden it).

Step 5. Pull the wire gently to secure the bracelet. Double check that there is enough wire that the bracelet curves to fit the arm. Because the beads are large, you need a bit more so check before you crimp and cut the wire.

Step 6. Crimp the crimp tube. Cut the excess wire.

Step 7. Add the Crimp bead to each end to cover the crimp tube. This makes it look finished.
